	Course Short Title	ACCT DECISIONS CONTROL	FIN STMNT ANALYSIS FOR EXECS
	Course Minimum Credit Hours	2	3
	Course Long Title	Accounting Decisions and Control	Financial Statement Analysis for Executives
	Course Catalog Description	Preparation and utilization of financial information for internal management purposes: planning and special decisions, cost determination, performance evaluation, and controls.	This course provides a framework for understanding the intersection between business strategy, accounting, economics, and finance. Using historical financial statements as the primary information input, you will employ tools that enable you to better understand the drivers of current performance and risk, forecast future performance, and construct a value estimate. These tools can be applied in a number of contexts including equity valuation, project selection, and managerial evaluation.
	Course Title/Description Change Type		Major Content Change
	Course Syllabus		ACCT 5263 Generic Syllabus.docx
	Justification		The course is being modified to cater to the changed corporate needs in accounting skills in their employees. The course content has been modified after comparison with offerings from other schools and after taking into account feedback provided by our corporate partners.

ARHS 4993	Course Last Update Effective	01/05/2013	Fall 2014
	Course Academic Level	Undergraduate	Dual Level
	Course Contact Hours Per Week		3
	Course Topic Names		existing course; topics already exist

	Justification		Changing course to dual level class to allow graduate students to take this class. Graduate students will have additional assignments, be required to write longer papers, and will have a larger bibliography for their research papers.
	Course Additional Notes		There is no syllabus attached since this course number is to be used for a variety of specialized topics within the area of Modern art. We are now regularly using special topics numbers for new offerings during intercession. We have a course on the books, ARHS 4983, Special Topics in Art History, which is approved already for dual credit, but we want to use the 4983 number for courses that cover art prior to the modern era only and use 4993 only for courses that cover the modern era; this will conform better with distribution requirements in the two time periods. In order to make ARHS 4983 and 4993 parallel classes available to both undergrads and grads we need to open a grad offering of 4993.

	Course Syllabus		Fall 2014 Campaigns Syllabus.docx
	Justification		We are developing a strategic planning emphasis for advertising and public relations students in the JOUR MA program. The JOUR 4463 Campaigns course fits that emphasis area, teaching students how to plan and develop an advertising and public relations campaign for local commercial or nonprofit organizations. Students complete a plans book, typically at least 20 pages or longer, demonstrating their research and analysis of the situation and providing recommendations for solving the client's communication problems. Students also develop deliverables based on strategy and research, including examples of recommended advertisements or public service announcements.

	Course Syllabus		PSYC 5033 Syllabus Draft.pdf
	Justification		The main change is to add coverage of diagnostic interviewing in this course, rather than in another course that we are requesting to be deleted (PSYC 5053: Advanced Personality Assessment and Clinical Diagnosis). The name change and description change reflects this additional content. This topic needs to be covered in our students' curriculum to ensure continued adherence to the requirements of the American Psychological Association's Council on Accreditation, who accredits the Clinical Psychology Ph.D. program. This is part of larger programmatic changes in the curriculum that respond to current student and alumni and faculty survey data regarding ways to improve the quality and effectiveness of the clinical psychology training program. There are not likely to be effects on other degree programs. These changes were approved by the department faculty on 2-3-2014.

	Course Title/Description Change Type		Major Content Change
	Course Syllabus		PSYC 5163 Syllabus Draft.pdf
	Course Pre-or Corequisite(s)		PSYC 5043.

	Justification		The main change is to move material related to personality assessment, previously covered in PSYC 5053 (Advanced Personality Assessment and Clinical Diagnosis) and integrate it with contents specific to personality theory and disorders already covered in this course. The course name and description changes reflect this addition. This change is part of larger programmatic changes in the clinical psychology doctoral training program curriculum in response to current student and alumni and faculty survey data regarding ways to improve the quality and effectiveness of the clinical psychology training program. We can cover the material in this class in a much briefer manner and still ensure continued adherence to the requirements of the American Psychological Association's Council on Accreditation, who accredits the Clinical Psychology Ph.D. program. In addition, intensive applied assessment experience will be obtained in a section of PSYC 607V (Clinical Practicum, Topic: Assessment).
