	Justification	addresses cereal processing and technology. We are strongly placed to offer this course for on camps and online delivery formats due to our very successful grain/rice processing program. There are very few similar courses within the region and this may attract students from other colleges too. Moreover, I have structured the course in modules. One of my other long-term goal is to extend this for professional development whereby a certificate in grain processing technology may be attained after successful completion of all	An undergraduate course (FDSC 4513 Cereal Processing Technology) of comparable content is being created with the intent to teach as a combined section with this course and feel that 5000 level for the graduate students would be a better fit if teaching as a combined course.
